Prompt Treatment Held Essential In County Battle Against Syphilis

Victims of Disease Estimated As High As 10 Percent Of Westchester's Population, Dr. Marsh Informs Members Of Larchmont Lions Club

An enlightening talk on "Syphilis" by Dr. Edward Marsh, of the White Plains, for many years deputy health commissioner in Westchester County, featured the weekly luncheon of the Larchmont Lions Club at the Larchmont Shore Club yesterday.

More optimistic than tuberculosis, syphilis cases reported in Westchester County last year totaled 671—more than double the total tuberculosis cases reported. How many cases of syphilis were not reported can not be known.

"The disease is transmitted almost entirely by bodily contact. This is the case in Philadelphia, of a party at which kissing games were played. One man, infected with the disease transmitted to nine girls who soon became aware of venereal disease, one infection of the disease in its early stages. The disease is not hereditary, but it affects all of us because these people see the state board of health which we must pay in taxes.

County Combs Disease The county is working through the clinics to combat the spread of the disease. An attempt is made to trace the disease in its source when a victim is reported; also others when the victim may have infected. It is often difficult to trace the disease in its source because 19 men and women whose infection could be traced to a single individual.

"Facing the fact that syphilis is a venereal and communicable disease will aid immeasurably in controlling it. Publicity will aid, and we must have publicity. Boys and girls must be taught the menace of syphilis before they reach high school age as a means of preventing their infection. The greatest number of persons suffering from the disease are between the ages of 20 and 40. The next highest age lies between the ages of 15 and 20.

How Cure Was Found Then Dr. Paul Ehrlich of Germany began an experiment with compounds having an arsenical base, such as had been used in the treatment of African sleeping sickness. This arsenical preparation sometimes affected eyes, but often caused blindness. Many similar compounds were tried without complete success until Dr. Ehrlich was successful with his 606th experiment in 1910. This compound is now known as Salvarsan.

U. S. AND GERMANY PROBE DISASTER

With the disaster being investigated as a possible case, Senator Chapman, chairman of the committee on commerce, said one of the purposes of the government's inquiry was to determine if sabotage brought the disaster.

Two Questions Asked — "There are two things that I want to know," he said reporters in Washington.

"I want to know if there was any sabotage connected with the disaster, and I want to know the type of material connected with the disaster consisted of the disaster."

Many of the survivors—some of whom jumped from the ship as it fell to earth, others who were captured to safety in the impact, and even some who staggered out of the inferno after—were in danger of asphyxiation in hospitals near the sea station.

Captain Max Prutz, who was commanding the Hindenburg for the first time, was one of those in a critical condition.

Captain Ernst A. Lehmann, whose Prutz succeeded and who was on the ship in an advisory capacity, also was in a very serious condition.

MONNET COGNAC. The Only French Cognac. Natural Product. French Government. Since 1820.

In the case of several before (times mentioned the story) of the world's largest dirigible, some of the passengers and crew jumped, created or were hurled from the falling ship.

Captain Ernst Lehmann, a supply commander in the World War, and commander of the ship on its previous voyage, stumbled from the wreck, gravely injured.

He was Captain Max Prutz, the German, looking for Lehmann to command the Hindenburg in Europe.

Others who, trapped in the blazing stars, their movements assisted, in the emergency could never get to land to witness what they considered a "tragic" aerial of the big airship.

"The Joy Went By" — Carl Weigand, 46-year-old, U. S. Department, who rushed to Paul Kinloch Hospital at Lakeland to see Captain Lehmann, quoted him as saying:

"I don't know what happened, but I just went up."

"Something strange seemed to happen," said Carl Weigand, who was an expert, he said, in No. 2 gas jet tests.

The engine workings remained where it fell, pending inspection by a team of inspectors. The exact investigation was closed to all operators and especially visitors.

Dead and bleeding survivors (they) know what happened—did not know, in fact, how they had survived.

The selected long swastika-emblazoned ship, grounded despite her bulk, sank into the Atlantic sea in a rain storm, more than 12 hours after the launch of the dirigible.

Uninjured despite a plastered neck, he was about with a crowd of passengers, many of them found that the English commander, who was found by toward the morning sea.

Two lines were down in 10 P. M. Passengers, sporting cigarettes and glasses on the field 200 feet below, waved gaily.

Three minutes later—explosion. The ship settled to earth, its long nose a solid mass of flame, the terrified, bewildered company shouting.

The status of the tragedy was all the same.

"A blinding flash," said Herbert (Chicago) a survivor.

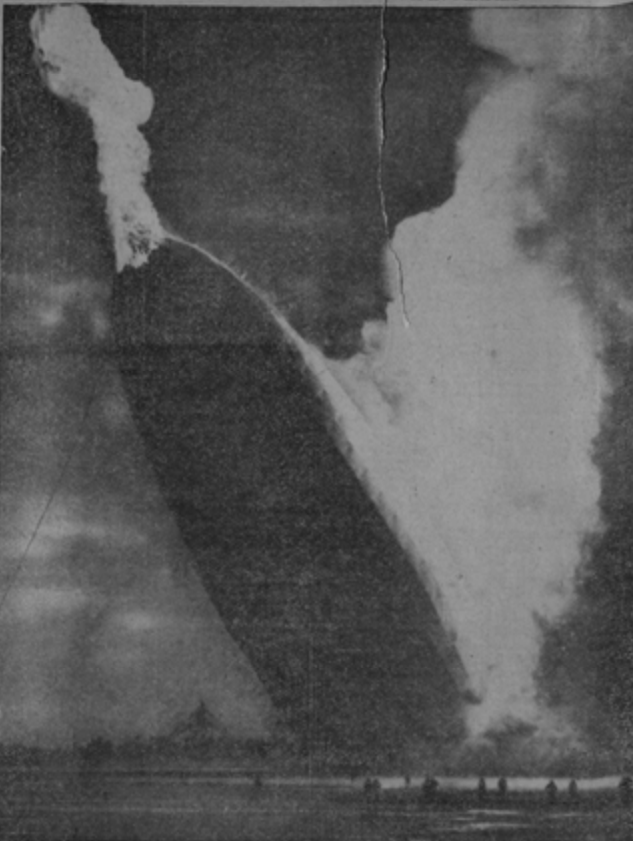

"A noise that sounded like bullets coming out of the fuselage," said Robert Boring, a photographer on the ground. "I saw the ship just sink down and the flames go through it."

The disaster writing a story for the Hindenburg's 125,000 miles of air, lasted across the Atlantic, was the first major airship to be destroyed by a light-airship ship carrying 35 passengers.

All other crashes, in the 34 years since Count Zeppelin began the use of dirigibles, involved military or naval craft.

It was America's fourth major tragedy of its kind, the other three being the naval dirigible USS Shenandoah, which broke in two during a storm over Ohio, Sept. 2, 1925, with 42 dead, but in the destruction of the Akron off Stratford Point, April 4, 1931, with 72 killed, and the sinking of the Macon into the sea, off the California Coast, early in 1931.

SABOTAGE PROBED AS U. S. HASTENS DISASTER INQUIRY

Roger Wilkinson, commerce committee chairman, announced that a committee would be set up to investigate the cause of the crash.

Representative of the German Government, Dr. (Germany) and the State of New Jersey will serve on the committee in the capacity of observers, he said.

Roger said that under the law the Commerce Department must conduct investigations in such navigation accidents and that it would take jurisdiction in the Hindenburg case because the airship was a commercial craft even though the accident occurred on "dry" property.

"The purpose of our investigation board will be to determine and announced immediately," Roger said.

"An observer for the investigation is a recognized fact that will be sought to be established by the Commerce Department," Commander J. B. Rosenwald of Navy, and Gen. (Navy) and State aviation official of the State of New Jersey.

Prof. D. Pegg Jr., director of the Air Commerce Bureau and Assistant Director of the Bureau of Aeronautics, will be in charge of the investigation.

their daughter went to Lakeland yesterday to visit her relatives.

"I was about 300 feet away," Mr. Adair said, "and I saw the explosion in the morning. The two ground crews took the report and were trying to find the explosion in the morning. The ship was burning brightly at the time."

"I was watching the motion and I noticed that one of them started up to leave the ship before the crash. Suddenly it exploded and in a short time the entire dirigible was destroyed in flames."

"My first thought was that the whole thing would come down on us. Then I thought of my wife and tried to get her. She was lying on the ground."

"I believe I would see my brother alive again."

Richard Adair found his brother in the Naval Hospital at Lakeland, Mrs. Leonard Adair, in leaving from the ground, going to a room in an effort to save herself in the ground. Her husband, being hospitalized in Dallas, leaped after her and attended her.

THE GENERAL remembered Napoleon's remark that "an army marches on its stomach" ... but he couldn't help feeling that he himself could eat and drink enough to keep the whole army going.

Unlike the General, modern man prefers to travel on lighter fare. When he drinks, he sensibly drinks lightly of a light whiskey like IRISH AMERICAN.

IF A TRUMP IS LED WHEN A DEFENDER leads a trump, it should tell the declarer something about the rest of his hand. One inference to be made is that he probably has not a workable club suit or intention to overtake suit. If he did he probably would try to hold on to his few trumps, with the hope of getting a ruff. CONVERSATION MARCHEES WITH CIVILIZATION

During 1935 there were in the United States 25 billion local and long distance telephone calls, equivalent to 800 conversations each second. It may be assumed, feminine use of the telephone being what it is, general of the conversations lasted much longer than a second.

That means 197 telephone calls a year for every man, woman and child in the nation. By contrast, elsewhere in the world the annual calling rate average per capita is 12-T or less than six and one-half per cent of the telephone frequency of the United States.

These are interesting figures. But interest should be in more than the social angle. For other figures made public by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company draw the almost inevitable conclusion that the telephone is used in direct proportion to the advance of civilization throughout the world.

For example, whereas there are in the United States 13.69 telephones per 100 population, this figures drops to 0.20 for Africa and 0.15 for Asia. Canada has 10.99 telephones per 100 population, as compared to 0.36 for Central America; Denmark has 10.64 as against 0.49 for Russia; Sweden has 10.28 and Switzerland 9.59 where China has only 0.04 per 100; the average for all of North America is 16.63 while for South America it is only 0.76 per 100 population.

To bring the comparison closer home what about Westchester?

As of April 1, 1937 there were 136,977 telephones in this county. Assuming the population to have grown from the 1930 federal census figure of 521,000 to an estimated population now of 600,000, this means 24.46 telephones in Westchester for each 100 of population a ratio almost double that of the United States, and tremendously far ahead of any other nation.

The United States, it might be noted, has only six per cent of the total population of the world and yet has one-half of the world's telephones. Approximately one-half of the world's population is found in the three countries of China, British India, and Russia and yet these three countries combined have only three-fourths the number of telephones in New York City. There were on Jan. 1, 1935, more telephones in the largest 12 cities of the United States than in all of the British Empire, including one-fourth of the world's population.

Back to the ratio, Greater London has around 10 telephones per 100 population, whereas as mentioned Westchester has all most 25. In only a few of the cities of this country is the Westchester ratio exceeded, Washington, D. C. has the highest figure, 37, followed by San Francisco with 36, Denver with almost 30, Los Angeles with 26, Seattle and Omaha with slightly less than 26 per 100 population.

Westchester ranks right along with Chicago and Minneapolis, ahead of New York City and Pittsburgh in this nation and far ahead of such foreign centers of civilization as Berlin, Brussels, Vienna, Rome, Antwerp, Amsterdam, Glasgow, Birmingham, Liverpool or Osaka.

In culture rides with conversation and civilization may be measured by the verbal interchange of individuals, Westchester would seem to be well up near the top.

THOSE FRIENDLY COMPLIMENTS

This newspaper inaugurated certain changes some time ago which it believed would be appreciated by its readers. The improvement has been duly noted and we have probably been paid more compliments during this space of time than during any similar period since The Daily Times first came into existence. Many have spoken of the general improvement of the paper, commenting on the fact that we are publishing more news and serving it up in a more interesting manner. Many have also complimented the change in the arrangement and handling of the special news. And our sports news has been praised for its fairness and full coverage.

For these many kindly and friendly messages, we are truly grateful. It is the chief aim of The Times to give Mamaroneck a newspaper which will constantly reach out and fulfill its reader's expectations and meet their demands. To that end, all constructive suggestions for the improvement of the paper are welcomed and such suggestions are found practical will be acted upon where it is possible to do so.

And, we might add, the advertising line-up of The Times has been materially increasing. Advertisers who have long had faith in the value of Times advertising are seeing that faith justified more and more. New advertisers are constantly coming into the ranks and finding that The Times is, as an advertising medium, all that it is claimed to be. Such growing support is bound to result in still further improvement in our general news service and in all else that will tend to make this a better, more interesting and more entertaining newspaper.

WESTCHESTER AND THE LEGISLATURE

Bearing the doubtful honor of having introduced more bills than emanated from any other county outside New York City, Westchester's two senators and five assemblymen have returned from Albany after having spent the better part of some 18 weeks in the state legislature. A review of their accomplishments, as briefly as possible, may be pertinent.

Outstanding was the commendable bipartisan agreement on the county reform act, now awaiting the governor's signature to permit referenda by voters this fall on county government changes. Other important measures initiated and passed largely through efforts of Westchester's representatives were the "husky-marriage" bill, the creation of a commission to study the county's future water supply needs, regulation of operation of beauty parlors, obtaining an appropriation of $320,000 to start work on connecting the cross-county parkway to the Saw Mill River Parkway.

Although the Todd-Williamson bill to give women equal right to serve on juror act was defeated, another measure, permissive in character, was passed, largely because of the assistance in this and former years of Westchester legislators.

These by no means represent the aggregate of work performed by the county's representatives. Senator Williamson alone, for example, introduced and passed in the senate 28 measures. A majority of these as bills introduced by other legislators of the county deal with local problems, a condition necessitated by this county's archaic charter and governmental structure.

Such bills range from one which would amend Port Chester's charter to permit the town to issue bonds in anticipation of taxes, the validation of levy and collection of Mamaroneck sewer taxes, the maturing of bonds in a Scarsdale school district, to authorizing Harrison to compromise installment payments on street improvement bonds.

Scattered through this mass of proffered legislation was a Doran bill limiting the size of trout to be taken in Westchester and Putnam, a Garrity bill raising jurisdiction of children's courts to 18 years of age, a Todd bill against liberation of foxes in Westchester, a Williamson bill to stagger public holidays on an economic schedule, a Smith bill to lower Mount Vernon's debt limit from 10 to 8 per cent a Lavery bill to allow fish to be caught in the Hudson south of Albany without license, and a Gamble bill stiffening the regulations for carrying of inflammable liquids along state highways.

The work of Mr. Gamble as chairman of the highly important assembly committee on taxation, requiring him to introduce revenue measures was particularly valuable. Successful efforts of Miss Todd and Mr. Williamson to prohibit hasty marriage will also serve a very useful purpose.

Of particular concern to Westchester was the efficient manner in which, in general, the three Democratic representatives, Messrs. Garrity, Doran and Lavery worked, with the four Republicans, Messrs. Williamson, Smith and Gamble, and Miss Todd, on legislation affecting this county.

Now, if the seven will participate in some effective manner with the new legislative commission to study and revise the fiscal affairs of the state, that the best interests of the taxpayer may be served economically, this county will be even more appreciative,

WORTH A TRIAL AT LEAST

Before Governor Lehman is a bill passed by the state legislature shortly before its adjournment permitting the use in this state, outside of New York City, of automobile parking meters.

The machines are reported of simple construction, relatively inexpensive, and have enjoyed quite a vogue in western cities. In general they allow one-hour parking for a five-cent fee.

It is somewhat questionable whether this device will solve the parking problems of Westchester municipalities. Certainly there would be loud and vehement protests from many merchants before whose places of business they might be installed, and even loud and more emphatic would be the squawks from hasty motorists who parked in such spaces without noticing the machines and who would return to find on their cars invitations to visit the judge and explain the invitation.

Yet nothing else has as yet been of any great aid in solving this constantly growing parking problem in the larger municipalities of this county, a problem which becomes yearly more menacing to the best interests of both the merchant and the motorist.

Maybe this device, should the governor approve the bill, is worth a trial in one of Westchester's larger communities. Surely a merchant who tires of all-day parking in front of his store would avail himself of a limited period. And almost certainly the opportunity of finding an hour's parking space for a nickel would be welcomed by the average busy woman shopper.

A FEAR WE DO NOT KNOW

Since the Hindenburg disaster, we have heard at least a dozen people utter the same thought in slightly different words, "Well, if we heard one man say, 'that is going to put an awful crimp in flying,' if the others didn't use the same words, the thought was at least identical.

The writer can recall when automobiles were still a good deal of a curiosity, and when automobile accidents had not attracted us to an appreciation of the possibilities. The mind goes back to the first fearful automobile tragedy which occurred in the writer's community. He can see the citizens standing around with white, frightened faces, gesticulating wildly. He hears voices which have long since been stilled, expressing the opinion, that this "would put a crimp in automobile riding." People just wouldn't take the type of conveyance which entailed such hazard.

History, as it has been made by the automobile, will be repeated by the airplane. Horrors such as the Hindenburg figured in no more part a crimp in flying than those early automobile accidents could stamp out the demand for a vehicle which could get people somewhere in short order. There may be a timid individual here and there who will vow that he will never take his place in an airplane but there were those who once vowed they'd never trust their lives to an automobile. Show us today an adult who can truthfully say that he has never ridden in an automobile. Certainly you could not find one unless you resorted to the bedridden or others whose physical ailments have prevented them from the experience.

It is a fact that we are a timid people and entertain a thousand fears regarding things which do not actually threaten us. For instance, we express fears that our liberties are being taken away from us, when careful analysis proves to us that we have more liberty today than we had twenty years ago. But in the face of real hazard, we are strangely courageous if not foolhardy. We are particularly so in regard to our desire to find a way to get where we are going in the shortest space of time. A few air-borne trips put a crimp in flying? Why, in another hundred years or so, our grandchildren will be complaining because the flying machines are slow and they will be casting about for some vehicle which will transport them to distant points in really short order.

REPUBLICAN NIGHT, TONIGHT

The Republicans are looking forward to a big night tonight—a night which will bring back memories of the old days, the old victories and the old fighting-spirit. It will be the night of the dinner-dance being put on at the Larchmont Shore Club by the Republican Club of Mamaroneck and Larchmont, Inc.

There will be many notables present and among the speakers are such outstanding orators as United States Senator Henry S. Bridges of New Hampshire, former Supreme Court Justice William F. Bleakley and Charles F. Griffiths, Republican Chairman of Westchester County.

The Republican "Who's Who" of this section will practically all be there and it can be safely reported in advance that everybody will have a bang-up good time.

MUST IT KEEP ON?

Year after year since the dirigible entered the field of transportation the world has witnessed crash after crash with growing toll of lives and loss of investments.

When such a tragedy has been an explanation followed by the prediction that the next dirigible airship would be free from such hazards. There probably will be a similar explanation and a similar promise now.

Some will assert that the substitution of helium for hydrogen will prevent recurrence of the Hindenburg disaster, as perhaps it may. But who knows where next the deadly gas will come from? The structure of lighter-than-air transportation?

With airplanes growing constantly larger and safer, with longer range of flight and increased safety devices, is it necessary to continue this ghastly experimentation in flesh and blood in an effort to justify the utilization of a transit device already proven too slow even to be safe?

THE WOMAN'S FORUM

Students of today, Vassar alumnae were told recently at a luncheon in Bronxville, should not be limited in their discussions and questioning to the recent past. In fact, they should be encouraged to keep alive and sharpened, so that they will have an interest in all that transpiring in the world around them.

Traces were never spoken of, of course—but it'd like to see applied to every class of society and not merely to students. When, not long ago, was urging a woman's group in this county to assemble themselves for a luncheon at the home of the members spoke up and said she couldn't wash the ladies would like to hear about labor unless they could hear the other side, too.

It was fair enough, excepting for the fact that to many of the members, it was not a question of "Don't know anything about" but "the other side." This particular lady made it plain that her and her group to become enthusiastic advocates of the cause.

How many factors have we? How many people are there? How many conditions do we have? Is there any child labor? How many women are in these factories? Are any of our first years? What are the sanitary conditions? How are the employees treated? The reason it is important for everyone to know the answers to these questions is because, on the answers depends the attitude of the workers—that attitude when labor crises arise, their attitude in political questions. And since the workers are the majority, the country over, their attitude affects the comfort and well-being of every citizen.

It doesn't make the least bit of difference whether or not the other citizens realize that fact, or to anything about it. It's all true.

The best thing has to get some of the "ladies" to take an interest in labor. Of course, the League of Women Voters does, but that's a minority group of about 500 men and women workers from the Alexander Smith and Sons Carpet Company in Yonkers, that the country women who persist in asking to what they consider "safe" subjects could do for the rest of the world.

I think the ladies would have been astonished at the attitudes expressed at that meeting—perhaps they'd even have been disappointed. Harold Griffiths, national organizer for the Textile Workers' Organization Committee, an affiliate of the C. I. O., pooled those to these men and women the fact that the carpet company officials had been fair and square and honest in the conference held the previous day. He believes the officials will live up strictly to that and not to allow any organization to seek members during working hours. Mr. Griffiths told the men and women roundly that they too must be discriminated and discriminated in the organization. He said that he would not seek C. I. O. members during working hours, that they must be discriminated and discriminated in the organization.

But in the face of real hazard, we are strangely courageous if not foolhardy. We are particularly so in regard to our desire to

THE COUNSELOR

WHILE PLAINS MAY 13—With the exception of measles, fewer new cases of communicable disease were reported to the County Department of Health last week than during the week ending May 1, according to the department's weekly bulletin issued today.

There were 142 new cases of measles reported last week, compared with 124 the previous week. Sharp increases in the number of new cases of chickenpox, scarlet fever and whooping cough are reported. One case of meningococcal meningitis in Seneca is reported.

A bill Senator Carthy carries now before Governor Lehman for signature into law or veto would prohibit the delivery of milk in any county adjoining New York City between 7 P. M. and 8 A. M. from Oct. 1 to April 30. It is a report of the bill passed by both Assembly and Senate due to an error in telegraphic transmission the previous session.

BEHIND THE HEADLINES

By JOURNALISTIC EXPERTS

WASHINGTON

President Roosevelt seems to have settled on a sort of ad hoc technique in moving toward a tentative international agreement to economic monetary and military problems. It's the kind of "last-act" method he might be described in terms of the politics with Lord Tweedmouth of Canada.

One of the principal causes of the current economic depression is that virtually nobody has been buying gold on a large scale except our government. Our purchasing at a fixed price of $35 an ounce has been notoriously profitable to the British owners of South African, Canadian and other gold mines. The solution now proposed in better counsels is that Britain add to some extent by France and nations in the sterling bloc, shall undertake to buy gold at the price we have fixed and thus divert the flow from us to them.

At first blush there appears to be an immense obstacle to the carrying out of this otherwise simple plan. Why the dickens should the British, having done their own thing, be asked to do the existing setup, but all out of their own expense? It doesn't seem to be a simple question.

But sponsors of the plan are persistent about an impending call for gold. It is the only way to reduce the price of the dollar and to reduce the price of the British, confronted by these choices, would be compelled to take the first as a matter of course.

A hard-boiled poker game is going on behind the scenes of the industrial and agricultural present seed producers—especially National and Bellamy's and Seed Workers' Organizing Committee. It is a struggle to avoid recognition of the fact that the seed industry is a monopoly. It is a struggle to avoid recognition of the fact that the seed industry is a monopoly.

The C. I. O.'s history to date has been 90 per cent fortuitous. Blaine was not followed. Lack of discipline, especially John Lewis and his lieutenant in attack. Lack of opportunity and the momentum of circumstances—not really any have kept the movement from falling apart. Nobody realizes any more that John Lewis has his big job at his post as to coordinate his forces and with much-needed discipline. He needs it to take full advantage of the position of the C. I. O. financially. It has been supported almost entirely by contributions from the United Mine Workers and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. There will be no more major drives, but he can't let the wings his organization into better shape.

An American with exceptional fitness cannot ignore private property. The United States government is in a state of chaos and is carrying on business as usual, even further than it has in the past. It is a state of affairs which is not only a national disaster, but a national catastrophe. It is a state of affairs which is not only a national disaster, but a national catastrophe.

BITTER CLEAN-UP PLAN

Village Manager Whitney has announced an elaboration of the regular garbage service with a view to making every week "Clean Up Week" in the Village. The collectors will now pick up a lot of things which they have not been in the habit of picking up and householders will now find it easy to dispose of a lot of things which they have formerly been perplexed to know how they could get rid of.

What are others doing to acquire Governor Lehman with their views on this proposed law to "improve the breed" of dogs? Is the law to become effective in Westchester and other high-class residential counties through default of public opinion?

Several things would help. One would be compulsory inspection of automobiles; another would be periodic re-examination of drivers; and a third would be a stiffening of punishment for persons guilty of reckless driving.

THAT NUMBERING ORDINANCE

The proposed ordinance which will make it compulsory for the village's householders to have their properties numbered and which will provide a penalty for failure to do so can be expected to meet some protest when it comes up for public hearing on May 24. There will doubtless be some who will oppose the proposed ordinance on the ground that it is too arbitrary.

Whether or not this is the best way to proceed to obtain orderly and complete numbering, we will not pretend to say, but we do say that the objective of the ordinance is right and that proper numbering should be secured that confusion may be eliminated.

While such numbering benefits the public in general, it benefits no one more than the property owner or householder himself. In fact, it is the person who should be most interested in seeing that his place is correctly numbered and that it is done conspicuously enough to serve a real purpose. Everyone should see that and, if there is no better way to achieve the end than by legislating with such an ordinance as has been proposed, then the ordinance should be made operative irrespective of any protests which may be raised against it.

"IMPROVING THE BREED"

Governor Lehman has called for next Monday in Albany a public hearing on the bill introduced by Assemblyman Hall of Nassau. Printed No. 2,596, Introductory No. 952, euphemistically entitled: "In relation to the formation of corporations for raising and breeding and improving the breed of their registered dogs."

Briefly, the bill, should it become law, will allow dog-racing and gambling on the results of such races. Naturally it provides for lucrative appointments, such as inspectors and veterinarians and special police officers.

These last have "the same grooves within and about such grounds or premises as are devoted to conables of the town where such grounds or premises are located," a condition which may easily cause some conflict between the special police and those named by the governing authorities of the municipality.

The meat of the bill lies in the concluding paragraph which reads, in part, that any director or officer of such corporation who complies with provisions of the bill shall not "be personally liable for the imposition of any fine, or prohibition, or in any manner held liable by reason of any violation by any person other than himself, of the provisions of this law relative to the gambling on the results of dog races."

other gambling, nor shall the maintenance of such thoroughbred dog race course, or the holding or conducting of thoroughbred dog races thereunder be deemed to be a violation of any of the provisions of article 88 of the penal law, nor of the provisions of any penal law not contained in said article.

A personal of district attorney Peris' copy of this bill is topographically incorrect in this respect.

Beyond any doubt, however, the purpose of the bill is to legalize dog-racing in this and other counties of the state.

What is being done, it may then be asked, by elements of this county's best citizenry to prevent the governor's signature making the bill a law?

Sheriff Casby has commendably wired vigorous opposition, pointing out the certain depreciation of realty in the neighborhood of such dog-tracks, the degradation of "vandalic elements" into the county, the opportunity for enrichment of gamblers at the expense of the poor, and the heavy load this will place on police departments of the county's municipalities.

What are others doing to acquire Governor Lehman with their views on this proposed law to "improve the breed" of dogs? Is the law to become effective in Westchester and other high-class residential counties through default of public opinion?

Several things would help. One would be compulsory inspection of automobiles; another would be periodic re-examination of drivers; and a third would be a stiffening of punishment for persons guilty of reckless driving.

As it is, the cautious motorists will stay off highways as much as possible during holidays and nights, will keep his own car in the best possible condition of safety, and will drive under the assumption that the other fellow is almost certain to do the wrong thing.

JACQUETTE lay back on the bank of the large and tried to think clearly. It seemed quite funny to her that the only person who could possibly be responsible for what had happened to her was Claude Edwards. Mrs. Joplin's case of all her nerves.

But when she came to ask herself what their object could be, she found it hard to find a convincing reason. They wanted her to marry Jim Arson, kill their father, for that she had understood. She was to marry Jim, being obliged that they had transferred all her money to him, and the children, no doubt, was to have his money. It was a little scheme, and it had very naturally come off.

She sat up in the bank looking indignantly. No sound reached her but the tapping of the water against the steps, and she concluded that the Joplin's must be for the night. Very carefully she climbed back to the house, slipping off her shoes, and kept nothing to do. She slipped and fell, she slipped and fell, she slipped and fell, she slipped and fell, she slipped and fell, she slipped and fell.

With a sudden sweep she flung the door wide open. There came a flutter of metal and she stepped aside. Just behind her a large man with white, with a couple of heavy iron bands and a flying pair of eyes, stepped into the chair in which they had been kneeling. She stepped aside, and reached to the door. The next moment Edward Joplin bounded up from the direction of the bedroom, without Mrs. Joplin and her separate. He looked a great deal more terrifying as he stood there, staring with wild, unseeing eyes. Jacques was certain that if he made any noise to her she would scream.

BETTER USE OF FLOWERS... Local gardens are getting beautiful now. They will soon be profuse with all sorts of bloom and will be attracting wide attention.

Local gardens are getting beautiful now. They will soon be profuse with all sorts of bloom and will be attracting wide attention and causing many to gasp in admiration.

The thought has often come to us that a better use might be made of flowers. It is hard to believe that He who created a rose created it to live its little life and perhaps die in such a profusion of flowers that it never had a chance to display its individuality.

With the tossing of 6,200 tax bills into the mail, a lot of people in the village can count on getting their annual-official invitation to "Come up and see me some time." Tax-bills are never over-welcome.

With the tossing of 6,200 tax bills into the mail, a lot of people in the village can count on getting their annual-official invitation to "Come up and see me some time."

These communications are to be slightly different this time, however, for when the recipients rip their envelopes open they will find accompanying the tax bill a card drawing attention to the "Forward Mamaroneck" campaign.

We presume that it occurred to the sponsors of this campaign that this was a good way to contact a large part of our citizens. Perhaps they did not think how significant the linking up of the cards with the campaign might be.

Westchester County, while viewing with some envy the large sums of federal and state moneys poured into New York City, Long Island, the 1936 World's Fair, and other ambitious projects elsewhere, has come to expect little for itself.

But the county's motorists had some reason to believe that the State of New York would take care of its own traffic, namely the caravans which have been coming through Westchester and from the metropolis. For it has long been accepted highway doctrine that through traffic is a state problem.

As a consequence, Westchester is asked for fiscal aid from the state only where such aid would benefit through traffic. Nor has it asked all that even this increasing type of traffic demands.

No strong request was made for funds with which to extend the Saw Mill River Parkway northward, although the county long ago acquired the right-of-way and the grading which was done months ago is fast deteriorating.

One thing the county asked this year was a new cross-county bridge over the Bronx River Parkway and New York Central Railroad tracks at Ellettswood, which with local and west traffic from central congested areas.

The county's estimate of the cost was first cut in half, with the understanding the remainder would come next year.

And now Governor Lehman has vetoed this $320,000 appropriation because "available" tax funds of the state do not justify these additional large appropriations at this time.

That new traffic will, by comparison, make this summer's congestion at Dunwoodie resemble little more than traffic on an Edinburgh Avenue on tag day!

THE WOMAN'S FORUM BY JOAN PARKS

A letter from Alice Wright of Briarcliff-Miss Wright is chairman of food and drug committee of the Westchester League of Women Voters.

"Most women realize that a large part of their business is that of buying. It is said they do from 80 to 90 per cent of our consumer buying. I dare say they do close to 100 per cent of the buying of food, drugs and cosmetics.

"Several new food and drug bills now await their fate in the House. Of these the most important are the Cleveland Bill, S. 128, already passed by the Senate and the Chapman Bill, H.R. 380.

"The latter may be definitely dangerous if they are dependent on a cure condition, only the doctor can help. Both bills restrict the definition of drugs to correspond more closely with the popular conception of that term.

"The majority of foods, drugs, devices and cosmetics sold by the ordinary retailer are not subject to excise for any of them to be otherwise. Legitimate business men are concerned about the economic protection from the cheat and the charlatan.

BEHIND THE HEADLINES BY JOURNALISTIC EXPERTS

WASHINGTON... Misconstrued... Democratic leaders on Capitol Hill blame their admittedly shabby showing on President Roosevelt.

He took up the Supreme Court returns first. He then turned to the record that the boss has given him no definite marching orders except on the Supreme Court returns.

The boys are a bit afraid to see the President, however. He often looks in apparent amazement without committing himself inwardly, and his nodding and smiling interest in a subject submitted to him.

Victory... Senator Norris' new investigation into power propaganda was prompted by two commercial firms which are working different sides of the street.

Bank Thief Sentenced To Eight Year Term... NEW YORK, May 25 (AP)—Louis Halbrun, 22, was sentenced to eight years' imprisonment on a conviction of having added $6,000 to $1,500 and $1,500 in the building and robbery of the Northern Westchester Bank at Katonah March 22.
